

Ángel-Manuel Moreno

Ángel-Manuel Moreno was born in Arenas de San Juan (Spain) in 1963 and spent most of his childhood in France, as the son of a migrant farm worker.

He obtained his Law degree (with honours) from Complutense University in 1986, a Master of Laws from Harvard University Law School in 1993 (with a Scholarship of the Fulbright Program) and a PhD in Law from Carlos III University in 1993.

In 1988 he entered the Spanish Civil Service, Managerial Officials Division (Cuerpo Superior de Administradores Civiles), obtaining the first place in the 1988 class. After serving in the Public Administration, in 1993 he started a fresh professional pathway as a scholar, progressing through the different steps of the academic career. Since 2010, he is a Full Professor (catedrático) of Administrative Law at Carlos III University of Madrid, Spain. He held a Jean Monnet chair on the law of European integration (2008/2009).

His teaching and research activities cover different fields: Administrative and Environmental Law, at national and EU level, general EU Law and Local Government Law. He has written many scientific contributions in the form of books, chapters in collective works and articles, which have been published in Spain and abroad in different languages. Specifically, he has published a book on the EU regulation of Chemicals: El régimen jurídico de los productos químicos en la Unión Europea (Iustel, 2010, 382 pp.). He has also submitted approximately fifty papers and contributions to international conferences, workshops and seminars

He is a member of the “Avosetta” European network of environmental lawyers. In his free time he enjoys sports, especially cycling.
